Wisconsin Supreme Court overrules Safer at Home

The Wisconsin Supreme Court ruled 4-3 today that Gov. Tony Evers’ administration overreached its authority when Department of Health Services Secretary Andrea Palm extended the Safer at Home to run until May 26.

The majority opinion was written by four of the court’s conservatives, including Chief Justice Patience Roggensack and Justices Rebecca Bradley, Daniel Kelly and Annette Ziegler. Conservative justice Brian Hagedorn joined the court’s two liberal justices Ann Walsh Bradley and Rebecca Dallet in dissent.

COVID-19 impacts musicians, entertainers

Shawna Nicols, official disc jockey for the Milwaukee Bucks and professionally known as DJ Shawna, flew back to Milwaukee, Wisconsin, on March 11 after DJing the Pacific-12 women’s basketball tournament.

She was home for only a day and a half, preparing her next set for the upcoming Milwaukee Bucks game at Fiserv Forum. Nicols was about to watch the Utah Jazz play against the Oklahoma City Thunder when a man ran out onto the court and announced the game would be postponed. Two players tested positive for the novel coronavirus.

“In that moment, the entire NBA literally crumbled,” Nicols said. The NBA decided to suspend the remainder of the basketball season and DJ Shawna found out through Twitter that she was out of the job.
